

CLINICAL PSYCHOLOGY PROGRAMS

The Department of Clinical Psychology is dedicated to training clinical psychologists in the practitioner-scholar model at the doctoral level as well as leaders in the field of positive psychology at the masters level.

Our students are trained to work in a variety of clinical and professional settings with a focus on cognitive behavioral approaches, empirically based assessments and treatments, consultation, interprofessional collaboration, advocacy, individual and cultural diversity, and serving the underserved. The Department houses the APA-accredited PsyD in Clinical Psychology program (<https://www.pcom.edu/academics/programs-and-degrees/clinical-psychology/>) as well as the online Master of Applied Positive Psychology (MAPP) program (<https://www.pcom.edu/academics/programs-and-degrees/positive-psychology/>).

At PCOM, clinical psychology graduate students focus on understanding the whole person in a manner that is consistent with the osteopathic philosophy of the university. Our faculty includes highly credentialed and respected practitioners and scholars in the specialty of clinical psychology who mentor students and provide a collaborative learning environment.